

R.E.N.E.W.

Reaching a New Energy Science Workforce

Water Resources Observatory (WRO) at Lincoln University is accepting applications for graduate and undergraduate students interested in hands-on environmental science research training. Interested applicants should submit a resume, a brief essay expressing their career goals, and a letter of reference to Dr. Sean Zeiger (ZeigerS@LincolnU.edu) by March 1.

ABOUT R.E.N.E.W.

1. Graduate Research Assistantships and undergraduate student employment
2. Student research projects at a forested AmeriFluxsite (MOFLUX)
3. Student research presentations at American Geophysical Union (AGU)
4. Become a member of the RENEW journal club
5. Travel to attend short courses lead by Scientist at ORNL during June
6. A night of glamping in Great Smokey Mountains
7. Graduate students will attend Fluxcourse at the University of Colorado

Cooperative Extension
Water Resources Observatory

